

Walking the West Devon Way

Walk 3 Plymbridge to Bickleigh

From Plymbridge the West Devon Way now continues all the way to Goodameavy on the old railway line now a cycle track which is a bit over 4 miles. It does go through a tunnel and over several impressive viaducts but so as you can visit the countryside on either side of the railway the 4 miles of railway track cycle path is split into two walks with Walk 3 only going as far as Bickleigh railway Bridge for a 4.5 mile walk.

Park in either of the car parks at Plymbridge. If you time it right you could park at Marsh Mills where Walk 2 started from and catch a delightful tourist train which is sometimes pulled by a steam engine to Plymbridge Halt. Part way along the cycle track we are going to drop down to the river Plym this is because a path at the Bickleigh railway bridge end down to the river is very steep and extremely slippery if wet and it is much safer to walk up than down. So for a short stretch of the West Devon Way you will be walking back in a southerly direction to do what might be loosely described as a figure of 8 walk.

The walk starts at the large Plymbridge car park which we walked through on Walk 2.

If you have parked in the quarry car park on the West side of the river Plym walk over the river bridge and under the railway bridge.

Setting off from the large car park walk up the ramp to reach the cycle track and West Devon Way.

It's a lovely walk along the cycle track but do keep in to the side as the cyclist can get up quite a speed.

Keep going when you reach this opening with the bridge in front of you. However it is important that you remember this turning and the bridge in front of you because we are going to return here and go over the bridge on the way back to Plymbridge.)

Having gone over the viaduct immediately on the other side fork left up a steep bank that quickly levels out to a narrow path.

When the narrow path reaches a wide dirt road turn left and follow this road all the way down hill ignoring any tracks that lead off to the right.

When you reach this T junction turn left and keep walking down hill and under the viaduct. Ignoring the little bridge under the viaduct keep on going to follow the river Plym which will soon be on your right. Now walk along the river bank.

Quite some way along the river bank you will reach a rock outcrop that borders the river. On the other side you will find 4 large logs lying on the ground which is a good place to stop for a snack. A few yards past the logs the path splits left and right. The paths both end up at the same place but you will need to use the much steeper left fork if the river has flooded the lower path.

Soon after the paths re-join they split again but this time you must ignore the narrow riverside path and fork left to walk up the steep rocky path. Halfway up you will see why we walk up and not down.

At the top, and just a few paces before stepping out on to the road, go sharply left and take the path that leads down to the railway line cycle track. When you reach it turn left. You are now back on the West Devon Way but this time walking in a southerly direction.

In just over a mile you will arrive back at the bridge you passed under an hour or so ago. Walk back under the bridge and turn left to go up the slope and walk over the bridge.

Go through a wooden gate and walk up the hill until you reach a wide level track. This was the Plymouth and Dartmoor Tramway which opened in 1823 and which mostly took granite from Princetown to Sutton Harbour. Most of the rails were removed in 1916.

At the bottom of the hill turn right and walk along the level track to a gate.

Go through the gate and out on to the road and walk back to one of the two Plymbridge car park where you parked your car.

The next walk in the series will take you through a tunnel.
